“Finding adventure with the Open24”

Entries are now open for the new 24 hour adventure race of 2005. Open24 is a non-stop event including mountain biking, trekking and canoeing, located in one of the most dramatic areas of the country. The elusive location has yet to be released by Open Adventure other than to point interested racers to the north west of England.

The race format is for male, female and mixed pairs it provides an excellent opportunity for those preparing for the new UK expedition race - wilderness ARC. The race is also a unsupported, with the race organisers moving kit boxes and bikes around the course for the racers.

Open24 also sees a variety of unknown disciplines that will be revealed along the way adding to the fun, enjoyment and adventure of the event.

James Thurlow the course director comments “the course is designed to provide an experience that will make the top racers grin yet enable mortals to still enjoy the fun bits.”
